No. 10121.—The following message addressed by His Excellency the Governor General of India, to the Civil Service of India is published for information:

"A little more than six years ago, I spoke to you, who are members of the First Division of India. I asked you to give to the people of India the heart that is in your hands. The heart to give strength, in the difficult peace is done. I know that you at a time of peace, when some of the problems the peace would be, and what tomorrow's support and help: and in peace and war, I have had it in full measure. From the bottom of my heart I thank you for it.

There is a brotherhood of service like that of which the world has never seen before. Men of different race and religion, Indians and British, Anglo-Indians and native Indians, are united together by common allegiance to one Christ and are pledged to the service of millions of your fellow-men in many different fields—Engineers, Doctors, Farmers, Professors, Bureaucrats, Educators, Judges, Artists, Scientists and many others. You and your predecessors have set high standards of loyalty, integrity, honesty, courage, honesty, of beautiful example and a responsibility to them, the only which you hold up to India as a bright example of hope and achievement in a distressed world.

[illegible][illegible]

Victory is assured, but single-calibre endorsement is a long way from the day of victory comes. There is work enough for each one of you today and when the words are shouted again, but a new world has to be built, there will be no lack of opportunity to show that good men, I promise you, for service and sacrifice and women in this faith which you serve.
